DIRECTORY OF INTEREST
CONCERNING GAME MATTERS

United States Department of Agriculture Circular No. 328, showing the organization and personnel of governmental establishments in this country, Canada, and Mexico, concerned with game matters, and giving the names and addresses of officials of State-wide game and bird protective associations and societies, and of the principal national organizations interested in bird protection, including the advisory board, migratory-bird treaty act, has recently been issued. It was compiled by George A. Lawyer, Chief United States Game Warden, and Talbott Denmead, Deputy Chief United States Game Warden, of the Biological Survey, for the convenience of game authorities, bird-protection organizations, and others interested in procuring information concerning wild animals and birds and laws for their protection.

Three legislative changes affecting game administration were made during the year. Under a resolution passed by Congress on June 7, 1924, the administration of the Alaska game law was transferred from the Governor of Alaska to the Secretary of Agriculture, who has assigned the work to the Biological Survey. The Department of Conservation of Alabama was changed by law to the Department of Game and Fisheries. A new State Game and Fish Board, consisting of three members, was created in Georgia to replace the former Department of Game and Fish with a single commissioner.

A number of changes in State associations have occurred during the past year, and are noted in this circular. Prompt notification of errors or of changes in the personnel or addresses of the State game establishments or organizations listed is requested by the Biological Survey. Persons wishing detailed information pertaining to a particular State should communicate with the game officials of that State directly.
